Learning, Teaching and Assessment Strategy

Research informed key lectures will introduce topics and concepts and these will be followed by small group seminars focusing on practice-based scenarios. As the module is focused on critically reflecting on practice experience you will be supported to develop these skills by completing the sections of the patch work assessment and acting upon the feedback students will also be expected to spend time developing their own self-directed and reflective skills.

A four-part patch work assessment with a reflective focus, consisting of a variety of small parts, each of which is complete. Each part has a critical reflection element, which will be based upon practice experience. The assessment consists of a variety of small parts, each of which is complete, planned in advance, and finalised retrospectively, when they are 'stitched together'.
